Love Poem

Samuel Sunko

Snowflakes falling, love takes flight
In the winter, shining bright
Two hearts beat, as one they'll stay
In warm embrace, through the winter's sway

The chill in air, cannot compare
To the warmth in their hearts, a hug to share
Hands intertwined, a step in time
In perfect rhythm, their hearts chime

With every snowflake, love grows strong
And In winter's quiet, it sings a song:

Warmth that will never fade
In the heart, never betrayed

So let the snow fall, let love take hold
In winter's arms, two hearts unfold
For devotion in winter, is the sweetest thing
A fondness so pure, a joy to bring.

February Fun Facts

African-American History Month

Althea Gibson
1927-2003

We all heard of Jackie Robinson, but have you heard of Rackie Jobinson? NO, cause I made that up.

Althea Gibson smashed away color barriers for tennis, a sport dominated by white, with her overwhelming skills!!
One of the best female players in the world :o

Love

- Think of the one you love while swallowing a FOUR leaf clover and your love will be returned...

(Before you swallow it, share it with me O.O)

- Pull a hair from the head of a person you like and they will love you...

(This way of loving you is by beating you up >:(
Never do that)

"You owe me a drink. Because when I saw you, I dropped mine."

That seems like a you problem...

"Wow, I've been blinded by your beauty. I'll need your name and number for insurance purposes."

Look! A UFO

"Where is it? I can't see it"

Well, you were blinded by me...
